Where can you turn?

Somehow we know without being told that our deepest problems won't be entirely solved out of a book or clinical program. We can't just think our way through or even let someone pull us through a crisis as intense as alcohol and chemical addiction. Partnered with those who are willing, we need to live our way through--embracing the spiritual and human relationships that can't be denied or neglected without recovery remaining a forever-receding horizon.

Encompass understands this and is committed to providing the direction and physical tools needed for people to break through their destructive patterns while establishing a community approach for long term recovery and transformation.

a recovery community

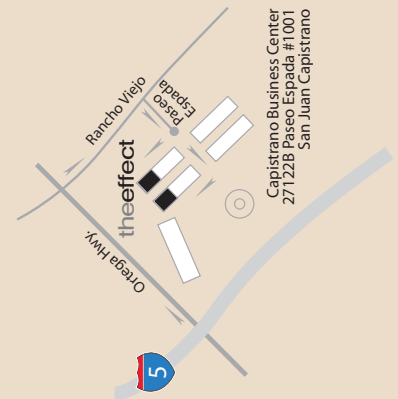

We've learned that true transformation, recovery, and rehabilitation is not possible without immersion in an authentic community. Encompass helps create ongoing relationships and focuses on encouraging and helping people to actively partner in their own recovery--that is, taking their recovery programs into every moment and every aspect of their lives.

Encompass offers specific recovery programs, but also creates an ongoing and seamless community presence through daily gatherings and activities such as studies, discussion groups, social and youth-centered events, classes, and workshops. Counseling and mentoring services are available, as well as access to AA, NA, and Al-Anon meetings on site--everything people need to repair their relationships, families, jobs, and baseline ability to live in community.

The goal of all our programs is to give people everything they need in order to be successful in life, to be able to discover or build upon new-found sobriety and spiritual awakening without falling back into old patterns. From initial assessment and referrals to interventions, detox, treatment, counseling, and aftercare, Encompass can help.

RecoveryLine

By the time an addict or loved one is ready to seek help, emotions and relationships in the family are often at a breaking point. In highly charged situations, it can be very difficult to sift through the dizzying array of recovery services and know whom to trust. RecoveryLine is a free recovery assistance service providing callers with access and referrals to proven and effective recovery facilities and experienced professionals, including treatment centers that have been featured on major media venues such as A&E and Larry King.

With a single call, people in need can talk to someone who knows the right questions to ask and can begin to assess their situation, creating a list of proven and relevant service referrals, including interventions, detox facilities, residential or outpatient treatment, sober living homes, counselors and therapists, 12-step meetings, sponsorships, spiritual mentoring, shelters, and even food banks. In difficult cases, callers can also talk to a licensed clinician who can perform a more detailed evaluation and make further recommendations.

With treatment plans covering both traditional and Christian tracks, clients can choose from an array of inpatient and intensive outpatient programs to meet individual needs and budgets. Encompass programs are highly structured and can include dual diagnosis treatment for those who are struggling with mental health issues along with drug and alcohol dependencies, gender specific programming, psychological assessments, and psychiatric evaluations. These services complement core programming of 12 step groups, individual counseling, psychotherapy, pastoral counseling, marriage counseling, family therapy, group therapy, relapse prevention, employment assistance, temporary sponsorships, exercise (gym memberships) and a variety of recreational outings...all near the beaches of Orange County, California.

Any treatment program is only as good as the people presenting it, and we ensure quality of care by maintaining a small client to staff ratio. The licensed clinicians, board certified counselors and drug and alcohol specialists working with Encompass have all spent years in the field of recovery and truly believe in their work and care about the people they serve--about really being in relationship with them. We also believe that chemical dependency is a physical, mental, and spiritual disease making treatment in each of these areas necessary in order for individuals to thrive, transform, and attain long lasting sobriety.

costs

In helping people get the help they need, we recognize the barrier finances can present. We work with every client to create an affordable program, and where necessary, try to create a combination of sliding scale rates, scholarships, and insurance benefits that can make treatment possible.

As an additional service to the recovery community, theeffect has created a one-stop shop in South

County for recovery meeting and gifts needs: birthday chips, AA literature and accessories as well as cards, mugs, jewelry, t-shirts, hats, fancy birthday medallions, God boxes, books, and other gift items.
